Bethlem Gallery, established 1997, is situated on the grounds of The Bethlem Royal Hospital.

Managed by a small, artist-led team, the gallery provides a professional space for high-quality artwork and fosters a supportive artist-focused environment.

Exhibitions and events are programmed throughout the year presenting a wide range of mediums and contemporary practice. The gallery is an ideal platform for experimentation, collaboration and skills exchange. Collectively the team develops the careers, experience and expertise of gallery artists.

The successful artist-in-residence projects also work with patients and staff on site to improve people's experience of the hospital environment.

The Bethlem Gallery programme includes collaborations with Bethlem Museum of the Mind, artists-in-residence, interdisciplinary research and partnerships with arts organisations across the UK and beyond. The charity campaigns for access to the arts in healthcare environments and engages audiences in learning and debate on the subject of mental health and artistic practice.

"The gallery is closed due to Covid but we hope to open again as soon as we are able."

"Pills are ok, counselling is ok and it will get you back on the streets, but what keeps your mind alive is what you learn here. That's what it's about – keeping your spirit alive." – Lee, Bethlem artist.
